

Ref. ....11-4-2024.....

Date .....

FACULTY OF ARTS
Dept. of Political Science

PhD Dissertation

Abdalla Al-Nouimat, doctoral student at the National University of Kazakhstan, was a visiting researcher at Yarmouk University under my supervision. I am Dr. Khaled Al-Adwan . he worked on the topic of "Central Asia and the Caucasus in Iranian Foreign Policy Strategy 1991-2021" since then I have been following the supervision of Abdalla's work, personally and continuously, electronically, and is studying Abdalla's main issue - the regional dispute over Central Asia and the Caucasus as well - has developed a methodology and worked on a historical approach to this issue

1. The importance and importance of research .

As global demands continue to evolve and collide often, a study of these dynamics is increasingly undertaken from a great narrative perspective and often ignores the practical and philosophical nature of international relations at the physical limits of these orders. The situation of Central Asia and the Caucasus may be the most important given the size of the affected humanity, not only within these two powers, but also in its vicinity, and therefore it cannot be imagined that in this paper we are able to obtain a thesis for a neutral researcher from Jordan such as Abdalla Al-Nouimat, who studied This relationship is through direct fieldwork in both countries, in an attempt to delve deeper into the forms and function of Central Asian interaction on its borders and create a clear analytical picture of historical development and modern schedule

2. Reliability and validity of theoretical, practical and novel results .

Al-Nouimat's work is built through an initial survey of the literature, on a broader and specific scale, followed by fieldwork in the above-mentioned countries: The novelty lies in the question of creative research as well as empirical fieldwork data for the two regions, which are unique and for the first time because of their relationship from a Central Asian perspective. It provides an objective vision and analysis, as well as the "Asian" connotation of the theory of international relations frameworks.

Ref. ....

Date .....

FACULTY OF ARTS
Dept. of Political Science

3. The scientific and practical importance of work .

The methodology of research in international relations is largely designed for the production of Iranian, Kazakh and Russian independent schools of international relations remains obscure. Abdalla Al-Nouimat's endeavor to include the context of Asian schools makes the analysis in this thesis very practical and effective in terms of policy formulation

4. (Improvements (if there are any .

Abdalla is an accurate and continuous scientist, and this is reflected in the professional quality of the thesis. I have seen several copies of the letter and on every occasion Mr. Al-Nouimat included new tips and information very efficiently. No further improvements are necessary at this point

5. Compliance with the general standards of a doctoral thesis .

This thesis is fully compatible with the standards of the doctoral thesis, both Academic and general expression

6. An approved (unapproved) thesis for defense .

A doctoral thesis proposed by Abdalla Al-Nouimat to obtain a PhD in Oriental Studies and International Relations, entitled "Central Asia and the Caucasus in Iranian Foreign Policy Strategy 1991-2021 (Studies 6D020900-Oriental)" and recommended defense .

Dr.. Khaled Issa Al-edwan